It's not CRA – it's a scam

Ontario Provincial Police want you to confirm who you're dealing with before sending any money anywhere for any reason.

As part of the annual Fraud Prevention Month awareness campaign, the Emergency Scam and the more recent Canada Revenue Agency (CRA) and other agency-related extortion threats have increased the financial losses sustained by unsuspecting victims. In 2015, the Emergency (or Grandparent) Scam claimed 474 victims in Canada lost nearly $2.5 million from more than 1,100 complaints. The CRA fraud drew 15,091 complaints, resulting in 751 identified victims who lost a combined $2.49 million. Police admit 95 percent of the crimes go unreported.

In the typical Emergency Scam, the victim will receive a frantic phone call from someone claiming to be a grandchild or loved one. The caller will explain that they are involved in some sort of mishap or are having trouble returning from a foreign country and need money right away. In the CRA scam, the criminals extort money from their victims by telephone, mail, text message or email, a fraudulent communication that claims to be from the Canada Revenue Agency requesting personal information such as a social insurance number, credit card number, bank account number, or passport number. Fraudsters impersonate the real CRA by telephone or by email. Fraudsters are either phishing for your identification or asking that outstanding taxes be paid by a money service business or by prepaid debit/credit cards. They may insist that this personal information is needed so that the taxpayer can receive a refund or a benefit payment. Cases of fraudulent communication could also involve threatening or coercive language to scare individuals into paying fictitious debt to the CRA. Other communications urge taxpayers to visit a fake CRA website where the taxpayer is then asked to verify their identity by entering personal information. These are scams and taxpayers should never respond to these fraudulent communications nor click on any of the links provided.

Here are some warning signs:

Urgency – The scammer always makes the request sound very urgent, which may cause the victim to not verify the story.

Fear – The scammer plays on the victim's emotions by generating a sense of fear. For instance they may say, "I am scared and I need help from you."

Secrecy – The scammer pleads with the victim not to tell anyone about the situation, such as, "Please don't tell Dad or Mom, they would be so mad."

Request for Money Transfer – Money is usually requested to be sent by a money transfer company such as Money Gram, Western Union or even through your own bank institution.

To avoid becoming a victim, police advise you to first check with another family member or trusted friend to verify the information before sending money or providing credit card information by phone or email.

If you or someone you know suspect they've been a victim of the Emergency Scam or someone posing as a Canada Revenue Agency official, hang up and contact your local police service. You can also file a complaint through the Canadian Anti-Fraud Centre, Crime Stoppers at 1-800-222-8477 (TIPS), or online at www.tipsubmit.com/start.htm

Home Alone Cat: Lucky

Home Again named this cat Lucky because he is lucky to be alive. His owners moved out of the house and left him there. Four months later, the realtor discovered a skinny cat inside the house. Maybe he lived on the water in the toilet; maybe he caught a mouse in the house to eat. He was so skittish when Home Again came to rescue him that he would not allow a close examination – it was a week later that an examination revealed he is a male under all that long fluffy orange hair. With loving patience from his Home Again fosters and especially the young girl fostering him -- who is like a cat whisperer! -- Lucky has regained his faith in mankind and is very affectionate. Lucky is probably 3.5 years old. He is neutered, clean, healthy, vaccinated, and ready to adopt for $85. Adopting an adult cat makes room in Home Again's foster homes to bring in another cat in need. Fosters are desperately needed. Call 613-474-3450.

Antifreeze is toxic to your pet

If you have antifreeze around please make sure it is stored in a tightly sealed container that is kept in a secure cabinet and that any spills are thoroughly cleaned up as soon as possible. Also, be sure to check under vehicles for any sign of fluid leaks. Here's why…

Unfortunately antifreeze tends to have a sweet taste that is pleasant to animals which makes ingestion more likely than with other toxic substances. Antifreeze is extremely hazardous if ingested because it contains ethylene glycol at very high concentrations. Prompt treatment is necessary as only a small amount can be deadly, for example approximately 1 tsp in an average sized cat and approximately 1-2 tablespoons in a 10kg dog if left untreated can be fatal.

If left untreated your pet may initially show signs of stomach upset and begin vomiting, followed by depression, instability and weakness. As the toxin damages the kidneys you will notice your pet urinating frequently and drinking large amounts of water. The ultimate outcome in these cases is kidney failure. If prompt treatment is given the hope is that we can prevent or minimize permanent kidney damage; however, if enough antifreeze is ingested and enough time has passed, the prognosis is guarded even with aggressive treatment. Since treatment for antifreeze poisoning is not always effective preventing exposure is very important!

There are less toxic so called "pet safe" antifreeze products but keep in mind that these products contain propylene glycol which is less toxic but ingestion may still warrant treatment. The main difference from standard products is that it takes a larger amount to cause a problem. If enough is ingested we can still see some pretty severe signs.

If you know your pet has ingested antifreeze or you are even suspicious that it may have had access to it, be sure to call a veterinarian immediately!

Celtic cross theories

The Celtic cross is a symbol widely associated with Ireland, but many may not know the unique history and debate surrounding this unique and instantly recognizable symbol. The Celtic cross combines a cross with a circle surrounding its intersection, but other than that description, little can be confirmed about the origins of this symbol that some historians believe can be traced back to ancient paganism. Historical revisionist author and researcher Crichton E.M. Miller theorizes that the cross had more practical purposes than those subscribed to it today, serving as a navigational device used by ancient explorers and builders. One popular, though highly unlikely, theory regarding the origins of the Celtic cross is that it was introduced by St. Patrick, Ireland's patron saint. This theory states that St. Patrick, or possibly St. Declan, combined the cross, which is the foremost symbol of Christianity, with the sun cross, a circular symbol traced to prehistoric cultures, in an attempt to illustrate the importance of the cross to the pagans he was attempting to convert. Though the exact origins of the Celtic cross and its meaning will likely never be known, there is no denying its endurance as a symbol and its ongoing association with Ireland.

Living Large

Humour by Steve Galea

Saint Patrick's Day, March 17, is a joyous occasion for those who are Irish. Interestingly though, it is also welcome by other people you might not have thought of. Here are 10.

1. Any bar owner who has kept open beer in the basement since last St. Patrick's day.
2. The Green Dye Manufacturer's Association.
3. Anyone who makes a living producing paper shamrocks.
4. Cab drivers.
5. Taxi cab upholstery cleaners.
6. Anyone who truly enjoys a poorly done accent.
7. Anyone selling "Kiss me. I'm Irish" T-shirts.
8. People who only know half the words to Danny Boy.
9. Any little people who walk into a bar with a sign that says "Leprechauns get to drink for free!"
10. People who think the Riverdance craze ended far too soon.

About Beer

Starting with malt

A guided tour through the art, science and history of our favourite 7,000-year-old beverage with beer columnist Brent Milcz.

As a brewer, talking about how beer is born is a bit of a rabbit hole. Where to start? What to leave out? To help demystify our favourite 7,000-year-old libation and up your brewery tour game, a grain-to-glass crash course seems like a logical starting point.

To brew a beer, we first have to design it. While there is no universally agreed upon list, it is worth a mention that there are more than 100 recognized styles and sub-styles of beer! In the brewery we start by thinking of a beer style to brew and working out the details on paper first. Ask any German beer purist, and they'll tell you that beer should only be made from malt, hops, water and yeast. While we may not always adhere to that so strictly in North America, these are "the big four." Each is equally important, but not equally complicated in concept. Malt is a mouthful, and a good place to start.

What Is Malt?

Grains are the backbone of a beer. Depending on the style, we can use many different grains, like barley, wheat, spelt, oats, triticale, sorghum, or something else. Most beer is made predominately from malted barley (known simply as "malt" in shorthand), but wheat and oats are also very commonly used in lesser quantities. Brewers will typically talk about grains and malt interchangeably (and maybe a little confusingly), but malt is specifically grain that has been specially prepared.

Malt is prepared by a maltser, who force-germinates grains like barley by steeping them in water, which makes the grain's sugar available to the brewer. He then kiln-dries the grain kernels in batches to varying degrees to create malts ranging from very light to very dark and with a wide range of flavour profiles (cracker, biscuit, caramel, coffee, chocolate and more). Malting is a whole separate industry in its own right, and this range of different malts becomes the brewer's flavour and colour palette for painting a beery masterpiece. The types of malts and quantities we choose to brew with can be used to accurately calculate on paper our beer's sugar content and colour.

We can then head into the brewery. Our chosen malts are cracked open in a mill and steeped in hot water again, in a process known as mashing. Mashing finishes the sugar conversion process, dissolves the sugar and infuses into the water the colour profile of the malts used. Simply put, a light-coloured beer is made from light coloured grains, while dark beers use darker, more heavily kilned malts.

Lower alcohol beers generally require less grain than bigger beers. Guinness, for example, has a roasty finish and nearly black colour because a percentage of its malt has been kilned nearly to the point of charring. As Guinness is a light beer in terms of alcohol content (4.2 per cent), brewing it would require less grain than a 5.4 per cent Heineken. We can also use mash water temperature to control our sugar profile and eventual alcohol content. After our steeping (mashing) is complete, we have a sugary, beer-coloured substance known as "wort" (rhymes with "shirt"). The grain is strained off in a process known as lautering, and, as we'll learn more about later, brewer's yeast will ferment the wort sugars into alcohol.

To summarize, malt provides our colour, our sugar for fermentation, and various "malty" flavour characteristics.

Next time: hops.

Brent Milcz is the head brewer for Carnarvon's Boshkung Brewing Company.

Robert Bateman to teach workshop at HSAD

By Jenn Watt

Famed Canadian wildlife painter Robert Bateman will be teaching a workshop at Haliburton School of Art and Design this summer.

From Aug. 9 to 11, Bateman will be taking students through the process of creating a work of art.

"I think he feels really connected to this area," said HSAD principal and dean Sandra Dupret in an interview.

"He is donating the piece he'll be working on during that time to the auction," she said. The annual auction raises money for students of the arts college.

Bateman's workshop will be called Passions and Practices and the HSAD catalogue says students will learn "how to foster creative ideas, in accordance with his belief that a good idea is the basis for a strong work of art."

Bateman's works, which typically feature painted wilderness scenes, are incredibly popular and can often be seen as prints. He is frequently described as Canada's most popular living artist. According to The Globe and Mail, there are approximately one million of his prints in circulation and another million coffee table books.

The workshop description clarifies that Bateman is not teaching an art studio class, but that he will be sharing "tips and techniques" and students will go for a hike to take photos for upcoming works.

"You are invited to bring a digital image of one or two pieces of your work, which Bateman will gently and publicly critique for the enlightenment of the group," it reads.

Lunches will be catered by Rhubarb restaurant.

GRANITE REALTY GROUP LTD.
Brokerage*

Welcome Kirsten!

We are expanding our professional team to include our new Sales Representative...

Andrew & Anne Hodgson, Owners of Century 21 Granite Realty Group Ltd. are pleased to announce that Kirsten Rae has joined our firm as a Sales Representative.

Kirsten is a hometown Real Estate professional who is a 5th generation Haliburton local. Born and raised in the area, Kirsten can provide a vast history of the County, while keeping you up-to-date on all current happenings and community information that is pertinent in the home buying and selling process.

Prior to becoming a Realtor, Kirsten earned her Honours Bachelor of Arts Degree from the University of Ontario. Following graduation, Kirsten worked in the sales and customer service profession where she continuously exceeded expectations, attained goals and overcame obstacles. Following tradition, Kirsten has chosen Haliburton to raise her family and call it home.

Kirsten understands that the buying and selling of real estate is often the biggest commitment of one's life, and is therefore devoted to working hard to make the process stress free and enjoyable, while building strong interpersonal relationships with her clients. If outstanding service, integrity, attention to detail and thorough local knowledge are important to you in a real estate professional, you have found your realtor.

"I want my clients to understand the process and feel comfortable with it. Most people describe buying or selling a home as exhausting and stressful; my goal is to provide a positive experience. I want my clients to walk away feeling educated, involved, informed and most importantly, satisfied."

The Century 21 system is a real estate organization with superior training programs, some of the most up-to-date technology in the industry and strong marketing support. These resources, combined with Kirsten's talent, will ensure our customers of a professional real estate experience.

Special Announcement

Terry Carr is excited to announce the latest addition to her ongoing education and specialized training in real estate. This past February Terry attended a Luxury Home Marketing course in Mississauga, through The Institute for Luxury Home Marketing, sponsored by RE/MAX.

The Course – which covered such topics as demographics of the affluent, lifestyle segmentation, trends and amenities in today's luxury home product, and creating a marketing plan for the multimillion dollar property – was taught by Laurie Moore-Moore, President of the Dallas-based Institute for Luxury Home Marketing. "Terry is an example of a sales associate who works to hone the special skills and competencies necessary to provide exceptional service in the fine homes, recreational properties and estates marketplace" said Moore-Moore.

CARR is an award-winning sales associate who has been in real estate since 2007 and specializes in the Haliburton Highlands market. Her devotion to promoting The Highlands as "the place to be" shines through in her marketing approach. The Winning combination of Terry's experience, local knowledge, and the power of the RE/MAX brand are second to none.

``The training provided new insight into the upper tier market, helped me polish my skills, and provided valuable networking contacts with other agents across the country who specialize in luxury properties,`` said Carr. ``In addition, I discovered new and creative tools for promoting expensive cottages, homes and estates and new resources for finding buyer prospects.``

For insights into the current state of the market, contact Terry Carr, Sales Representative, at REMAX North Country Realty Inc., (Independently Owned and Operated) cell: 705-935-1011, or email terry@remaxhaliburton.com

Hundreds of people gathered at the Lloyd Watson Community Centre in Wilberforce on Saturday, Feb. 27, in order to raise funds to rebuild the Harcourt Community, which was razed by fire in November last year. SARAH VANCE Special to County Life

Harcourt Community Centre fundraising underway

By Sarah Vance

Despite freezing rain advisories, more than 300 people came to the Lloyd Watson Centre in Wilberforce on Saturday, Feb. 27 for a fundraiser in support of the Harcourt Community Centre.

It has been just three months since an electrical fire, believed to have begun in the attic, reduced the community centre to rubble and ashes in the early morning of Sunday, Nov. 29. While Highlands East fire chief Bill Wingrove along with 31 firefighters arrived at the scene after 911 calls were made, the community centre could not be saved.

The fire has had a significant impact on the community, which is still grieving the loss of what was described by many as the "heart of the community." In fact, just about everyone at the fundraiser on Saturday night was ready to share a memory about the facility, which was built in 1950.

"I know of one local family who held four generations of marriage ceremonies at the centre," said Mary-Ellen Coghlan, a volunteer who is part of the fundraising committee. "Right now, a young couple has had to postpone their ceremony until the new hall is built."

"Organizing this dance has brought many people together," said Coghlan. "For example, all of the prizes and auction items have been donated by local residents." Local favourites, the Crosscuts, came out of retirement, to play songs like "Folsom Prison Blues," as locals grabbed a partner to dance.

Harcourt, located where the municipalities of Dysart and Highlands East join, is known as the geo-caching capital of Canada. Once a popular route near Pusey Station on the Irondale, Bancroft and Ottawa Railway (IB&O), it is now the last stop for Benoir and Elephant Lake cottagers, as well as a destination for sledders travelling the Heritage Trail.

"There has been an outpouring of generosity," said Barb Robertson, who spearheaded the fundraiser. "Funds are coming from Bancroft, Haliburton, Wilberforce and Harcourt families who have been truly generous. People are even contacting us from the States."

There were at least 30 volunteers catering roast beef on a bun and tending the busy bar on Saturday night. A silent auction filled the front foyer, while the 50/50 draw was estimated to have raised more than $700.

"We are hoping to raise at least $8,000 tonight," said Robertson. The fundraising committee is focusing on items that will be needed to run the facility, such as fixtures and tables and chairs. "There is no certainty as to when the community centre will be rebuilt, but we are hoping to see action in the fall."

Fundraising efforts will need to continue and a Scotia Bank account (#934920011487) has been opened, in order to receive funds at any time.

Summer living is easy.
Choosing just one art course is hard.

This year's summer program features over 300 courses, including 70 new classes to explore: Woodcarving, Celtic Design & Monograms, Digital Explorations & Collage, Landscape Art Alternatives, Makeup FX & Character Design, and Contemporary Sculpture, to name a few.

So whether you are enrolling for the first time, or you come back every year, we have courses for your interests, abilities and talent.

The Haliburton School of Art + Design is a wonderful place to learn, grow and create and we hope you can take some time for yourself this summer to explore fresh possibilities.

Spectacular Spain

Linda Coneybeare
Travel Plus

Hola! I am just back from a week on the Costa Tropical in Andalucía Spain. My sister and her husband wisely decided to spend the winter in Spain so that meant free accommodation for me!

I travelled with my niece Jessamyn, and her friend Dan. Off we flew to Spain, leaving Haliburton when the weather was -42°C. We flew with Transat via Montreal, a short flight to Montreal then a relaxing six hour non-stop flight from Montreal to Malaga. I found it much easier to connect to another flight on this side of the Atlantic with no jetlag to deal with, and our bags were transferred directly. So easy!

With Tom awaiting us at Malaga Airport with his car rental, we drove one hour to the resort town of Almunecar, a town the size of Lindsay.

It is located right on the shining Mediterranean Sea and offers 124 restaurants! Siesta time happens in Spain, the shops close from 2 to 5 p.m. every afternoon, but those 124 restaurants do not! It was typical to enjoy a three-hour lunch under the shade of orange trees, sipping the local vino blanca (white wine), fresh salads and seafood.

I quickly discovered that conveniently located right outside their apartment was the Isle de Capri café serving café con leche and croissants, two Euros for all that, and free wifi! I made that a morning habit. One day they were already sold out of their homemade croissants so I had lemon cheesecake instead – I managed!

There are two kinds of restaurants, those that open in the morning and close after siesta. Other restaurants serve only dinner, and do not open until 7:30 p.m., but stay open until after midnight. A typical menu included Calabrese salad (with the best tomatoes!) fresh fish, chicken or pasta followed by dessert: homemade ice cream, or cheesecake (as mentioned above).

Tapas are always included when you order an alcoholic drink (like white wine). If you drank enough you could skip dinner, just enjoy the free tapas! Tapas would normally include olives, fresh bread with olive oil and local ham.

One day I went to the local grocery store, the Super Mercado, cauliflower was two Euros, fresh strawberries the same. A bottle of local wine was two Euros: less expensive than bottled water or Coca Cola!

Bev and Tom's apartment was located right across the road from the sea, with a beautiful balcony. My sister apologized for the cool temperatures – 14 to 15°C that day – but I reassured her coming from -42°C this is tropical!

We explored the town and enjoyed the shopping, more coffee breaks sometimes with wine included!

One destination we all agreed could not be missed was the ancient city of Granada. We toured the gardens and buildings of the Alhambra: a beautiful Moorish castle later occupied by Spanish royalty. The snow caps Sierra Nevada Mountains could be seen in the distance: beautiful!

One afternoon we visited a "white town" there are many of these ancient whitewashed villages in Andalucia. The homes can only be accessed by winding narrow streets. All the buildings are white, with beautiful mosaic tiles, and a lovely main square with sparkling fountains.

Both Spain and Portugal are popular winter destinations. Long stay rates are very reasonable and the direct flights to Malaga and Faro with Transat so convenient.

I would love to return to this region of Spain. Not so busy and touristy as Marbella and Torremolinos which are located an hour west of Malaga Airport.

Soon I will be spending a week in Key Largo with my son Patrick and his family. We will tour all down the Keys and enjoy a dinner at Jimmy Buffett's Restaurant in Key West. Key lime pie included!

Happy spring from Linda and Machenzie at Travelplus!
